Introduction

1. This Standard describes the overall objective and scope of the audit of general purpose financial statements of an enterprise by an independent auditor. According to para 3.3 of the Preface to the Statements of Accounting Standards[2] issued by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of India, "the term 'General Purpose Financial Statements' includes balance sheet, statement of profit and loss and other statements and explanatory notes which form part thereof, issued for the use of shareholders/members, creditors, employees and public at large." References to financial statements in this Standard should be construed to refer to general purpose financial statements.

Objective of an Audit

2. The objective of an audit of financial statements, prepared within a framework of recognised accounting policies and practices and relevant statutory requirements, if any, is to enable an auditor to express an opinion on such financial statements.

3. The auditor's opinion helps determination of the true and fair view of the financial position and operating results of an enterprise. The user, however, should not assume that the auditor's opinion is an assurance as to the future viability of the enterprise or the efficiency or effectiveness with which management has conducted the affairs of the enterprise.

Responsibility for the Financial Statements

4. While the auditor is responsible for forming and expressing his opinion on the financial statements, the responsibility for their preparation is that of the management of the enterprise. Management's responsibilities include the maintenance of adequate accounting records and internal controls, the selection and application of accounting policies and the safeguarding of the assets of the enterprise. The audit of the financial statements does not relieve management of its responsibilities.

Scope of an Audit

5. The scope of an audit of financial statements will be determined by the

The aspects relating to para 3.3. of original Preface are dealt by para 3.4 of the said Revised Preface, according to which General Purpose Financial Statements also includes Cash Flow Statements.

auditor having regard to the terms of the engagement, the requirements of relevant legislation and the pronouncements of the Institute. The terms of engagement cannot, however, restrict the scope of an audit in relation to matters which are prescribed by legislation or by the pronouncements of the Institute.

6. The audit should be organised to cover adequately all aspects of the enterprise as far as they are relevant to the financial statements being audited. To form an opinion on the financial statements, the auditor should be reasonably satisfied as to whether the information contained in the underlying accounting records and other source data is reliable and sufficient as the basis for the preparation of the financial statements. In forming his opinion, the auditor should also decide whether the relevant information is properly disclosed in the financial statements subject to statutory requirements, where applicable.

7. The auditor assesses the reliability and sufficiency of the information contained in the underlying accounting records and other source data by:

(a) making a study and evaluation of accounting systems and internal controls on which he wishes to rely and testing those internal controls to determine the nature, extent and timing of other auditing procedures; and

(b) carrying out such other tests, enquiries and other verification procedures of accounting transactions and account balances as he considers appropriate in the particular circumstances.

8. The auditor determines whether the relevant information is properly disclosed in the financial statements by:

(a) comparing the financial statements with the underlying accounting records and other source data to see whether they properly summarise the transactions and events recorded therein; and

(b) considering the judgements that management has made in preparing the financial statements; accordingly, the auditor assesses the selection and consistent application of accounting policies, the manner in which the information has been classified, and the adequacy of disclosure.

9. The auditor's work involves exercise of judgement, for example, in deciding the extent of audit procedures and in assessing the reasonableness of the judgements and estimates made by management in preparing the financial statements. Furthermore, much of the evidence available to the auditor can enable him to draw only reasonable conclusions therefrom. Because of these factors, absolute certainty in auditing is rarely attainable.

10. In forming his opinion on the financial statements, the auditor follows procedures designed to satisfy himself that the financial statements reflect a true and fair view of the financial position and operating results of the enterprise. The auditor recognises that because of the test nature and other inherent limitations of an audit, together with the inherent limitations of any system of internal control, there is an unavoidable risk that some material misstatement may remain undiscovered. While in many situations the discovery of a material misstatement by management may often arise during the conduct of the audit, such discovery is not the main objective of audit nor is the auditor's programme of work specifically designed for such discovery. The audit cannot, therefore, be relied upon to ensure the discovery of all frauds or errors but where the auditor has any indication that some fraud or error may have occurred which could result in material misstatement, the auditor should extend his procedures to confirm or dispel his suspicions.

11. The auditor is primarily concerned with items which either individually or as a group are material in relation to the affairs of an enterprise. However, it is difficult to lay down any definite standard by which materiality can be judged. Material items are those which might influence the decisions of the user of the financial statements[3]. It is a matter in which a decision is arrived at on the basis of the auditor's professional experience and judgement.

12. The auditor is not expected to perform duties which fall outside the scope of his competence. For example, the professional skill required of an auditor does not include that of a technical expert for determining physical condition of certain assets.

13. Constraints on the scope of the audit of financial statements that impair the auditor's ability to express an unqualified opinion on such financial statements should be set out in his report, and a qualified opinion or disclaimer of opinion should be expressed, as appropriate.

Effective Date

14. This Standard on Auditing becomes operative for all audits relating to accounting periods beginning on or after April 1, 1985.
